Category:Windows-only softwareQ: Read text file with line breaks I'm trying to read a text file that has some specific line breaks. I currently do the following: `$file = fopen("C:\example.txt", "r"); while (!feof($file)) { $data = fgets($file, 32767); //do my stuff here } fclose($file);` I want to read and process line 3 (which contains special linebreaks) in the while loop and start a new when the end of line break is met (which I understand will happen after line 14) Is that possible? I've done a bit of research but can't seem to find anything that works.

A: Use `\r` to signal newlines instead of `,` since some system will (correctly) translate `\r` to one line break. See for details. Gene expression, cell cycle progression, and development of citrus juice. This study investigated the effect of freeze-thawing on the quality of a citrus juice and the expression of malic acid (MA) biosynthesis genes. In addition, the effects of pulse freezing on cell cycle progression in four plants at different stages of development were examined. Sugar content, pH, TA, and MA were measured. The developmental stages were defined according to the citrus bud and fruit major-to-minor axis ratio. Two ecotypes of bitter (or mandarin) and two sweet (or oranges) were included. We first studied the effect of two different methods of juice preparation on juice quality. After weighing, a 5% juice was prepared from sweet fruits using a press that was filled to capacity, or from bitter fruits via simple squeezing. Juice from bitter fruits was diluted to 5% and then treated by placing it in an ice-water bath for 3 min, while juice from sweet fruits remained at room temperature. The result showed that both methods had a similar effect on juice quality. Moreover, cell cycle progression of sweet buds (S1-S1), bitter buds (S1-B), sweet fruit (S1-F), and bitter fruit (S1-B) were examined using the same cell solution ( $1.5 \times 10^6$  cells ml<sup>-1</sup>). The results of the bioreactor showed that cell cycle progression was ba244e880a
